REAL ESTATE IN MARCH

GRATIFYING BUSINESS DONE DURING THE PAST MONTH.

Recent Pleasant Weather Has Caused Unusual Activity-Van Camp Company Stock All Sold.

During the month of March more real estate was transferred in Marion county than in any similar month of the three years of the present century. In March, 1900, the real estate transferred amounted to $1,125,672, in March, 1901, to $1,156,432, and in March of the present year property to the value of $1,661,498 was sold in the county. Much of the property sold was in large tracts, and during the month several large deals were completed that were not recorded, as the publication of the purchases was not thought advisable at the time. In addition to the large sales of realty the usual number of small dwelling-house sales were recorded.

The pleasant weather of the last two weeks of March and the beginning of April gave an impetus to the real-estate business cause to complain. The agents were busy with horses and buggies and trolley cars in showing home-hunters over the city in search of desirable property. Some lots were sold, but not many. The old additions that were platted last year are as fortunate as the new plots in sales and the chief requisites for the sale of property seems to be the proximity to a street-car line and the price of the property offered for sale.

PREFERRED STOCK ALL SOLD.

Sale of Issue of $200,000 of the Van Camp Hardware Company.

Two weeks ago the Central Trust Company and J. F. Wild & Co. announced that they had purchased the total issue of the $200,000 of preferred stock of the Van Camp Hardware Company and would soon place t on the market for public subscription. Already all of the stock has been sold to a few subscribers at $195. The stock was all subscribed by Indianapolis people as an investment and the readiness with which the investment was made as soon as the opportunity was announced was satisfying to the hardware dealers. The bankers who managed the sale of the stock are gratified at the response received to the offer and take it as an indication of the soundness of the Van Camp Hardware Company and the trust reposed in themselves as conservative dealers in securities.

Telephone Etiquette.

New York Mail and Express. The perfection of telephone etiquette has been reached. A certain distinguished forigner who has a thriving professional business in New York also possesses certain qualifications which give him the entree into fashionable society, and he is busy with these pleasant duties after 4 o'clock each day. But, of course, he sometimes responds to telephone calls, and it has been the seat of the buggy. Matches were also his invariable habit to carefully exchange his office coat for the black cutaway which in the new trotter. On the road when the he wears on the street before going to the

He has recently become enamored of a have been more frequent of late. His office associates have observed that he combs his beard and mustache with some care before commencing his conversation over the phone, and they have come to the conclusion that their handsome chief has reached the acme of politeness in his intercourse with the gentler sex, even if it is by wire.

SHERLOCK ON THE HIGH SEAS.

A New Adventure Chronicled by a Cambridge Dr. Watson.

"Hist!" said the Pirate Chief; and every pirate hissed. Far, far down in the hold was heard the tremulous moan of a captive Things had come to such a pass as folows: The long, low, black, rakish-looking craft lay in the offing, manned by her swarthy pirate crew, and her scuppers ran with gore, in which the pirates washed their hands whenever they thought they needed it. For the notorious Mary Ann was not the romantic pirate craft of nursery fiction, but the pitiless and cruel sea marauder of uncompromising fact. She flew the Jolly Roger at her masthead, and she was armed to the teeth. Her captain, a dastardly Spaniard (whose long black hair had given rise to our expression, "The Spanish Mane"), was also armed to the teeth, of which he had thirty-eight, each one loaded with the gold of captured to the muzzle." His swarthy and desperate and few of the real-estate agents had crew was never far behind him in this But now to the fair captive and her moan. Far, far down in the hold (as we have said) she lay, smoking strong shag tobacco in her trusty briar and tremulously moaning at intervals. Her features were temporarily obscured by a tilted stein, but a tell-tale hypodermic needle was sticking carelessly in her forearm, and the Hound of the Baskervilles lay phosphorescently at her feet, and licked her hand whenever he thought it need-but enough! You have doubtless already pierced the maid's disguise, and perceived that the vilainous dastards on the upper deck will have to deal with the redountable Sherlock Holmes himself. Misguided men! They were about to raffle for her, little knowing that she had purposely contrived her capture for their destruction.

So now we are again at our starting point, or after the Pirate Chief had remarked "Hist!" on hearing the tremulous moan which we have already mentioned he sent two of his cutthroat minions to bring the moaner on deck for raffling purposes. queenly in her regal gait. Even the hardened members of the Criminal Club, who composed that desperate crew, were awed to silence by the dazzling beauty of her girlish innocence.

In fact, Sherlock's disguise was a peach (to use a Chimmle Faddenism), and she had the whole push on a string. At last she raised her delicate white hand and

"Gentlemen," she asked, in accents low and deceitful, "am I indeed to be raffled "Madame, you are," replied the pirate captain, stifling a Charles River dam with courtly politeness, "and I trust that you will fall to my lot as a blushing bride." Sherlock sighed "Alas!" she said, with tears in her voice, "I am not worthy. I am poor and disguised-I mean despised-and can bring you no fit dowry, save my youthful face. But stay! Hast heard of Capt. Kidd?" "We have," said the cutthroats.

Sherlock drew a wrinkled chart from her "Then look," she said. "Here is the map of the location of his buried treasure. Upon yon tender island fringed with green lies hid a fortune for each man of you. That is my dowry.' The marauders of the sea all cheered and urged her to read them the cipher of the chart. Lack of space prevents its unabridged reproduction in these columns, but we will quote enough to show that pirates are simple folk, and were as children in the hands of gully, wily Sherlock and his machinations. Thus ran the chart: "Toe finde ye munney I hav berried goe $13,130.00 toe ye first tre u see & clime itt untill u are verry tired. Then looke around u in ye leafey foliage & if u doe not finde a needle itt is not y'r faulte, for itt is ye wrong tre. Butte doe not be discurridged. Keepe coole, & when ye seconde winde comes to u clime ye right tre, finde ye needel & holde itt in ye right hande, lookeing carefullie atte ye grounde through ye lefte eye of ye needl, Were y'r glance strykes is ye treasure. Digge twentie feete down for ye sake of ye exercise, then fill uppe ye excavation & digge sum more. U canne keepe wot u canne finde. Y'rs with affexion.

"CAPTAIN KIDD." When Sherlock had finished the pirates were overjoyed. It seemed to them just as easy as finding money. "Go, friends," said she dramatically, "and return laden with my dowry to claim me as your bride."

So the whole crew of twenty-seven murderers piled into the jolly boat and pulled for the shore. They did not know that she was Kidding them. As soon as Sherlock was left alone on the Mary Ann he rushed to the masthead and waved her apron twice out into the stilly, starry night. This was a signal. Then she pulled the Hound of the Baskervilles tail till he barked hoarsely. This was another Anon, a revenue cutter slipped abreast the doomed Mary Ann and in a trice Sherlock was in Dr. Watson's arms and the officers of Scotland Yard swarmed over the pirate craft. "This is magnificent, Holmes!" cried the doctor. "We have their ship and they are at our mercy on yonder island climbing banyan trees. And all was accomplished by your superhuman guile. Why, you will

"Tut, tut, my dear Watson," said Sherlock sadly, passing his hand over her peachblow complexion, "you know better than that, for this isn't the first time we've aided Scotland Yard together. I do all the work, but who gets the credit? Inspector Cram, of course, of the yard.

COMMON-SENSE TRAINING.

How a Buffalo Police Captain Subdued a Bad Horse.

Buffalo Enquirer.

While discoursing on various subjects in Police Court and awaiting the arrival of Judge Murphy, the other day, Captain Regan, of the Eighth precinct of Buffalo, 225.00 | amused his hearers by tales of police captures and other interesting subjects. Before | REAL ESTATE-10 acres west on Plainfield line; the conversation had gone very far the subject turned to horses and their values. Captain Regan is thoroughly versed on the subject of horses. He understands a horse from the ground up, and it is a mighty big horse that can conquer the mighty son of Erin's isle. The athletic captain can handle the most erratic horse as easily as though it were a ping-pong

In the course of the conversation the information leaked out that the captain once | REAL ESTATE-North Meridian-st. residence: owned a horse whom the neighbors dubbed Beelzebub. From the nature of the name one would believe that the horse had a fiery nature, but he was as docile as a lamb, The horse did not remain in the possession of the captain very long because his staying qualities attracted the attention of a man who doted on quiet horses. Captain Regan's horse would remain in one spot all day without moving if some one didn't take take $3,800. Four, six, seven and eight-room cottages, $100 cash, balance payments. The temper of the second horse was just the reverse of that of Beelzebub. The horse was the most skittish animal that ever gnawed a halter rope. He absolutely refused to become reconciled to city life. He shied at trolley cars, jumped when he heard steam whistles, bolted at automobiles, and balked whenever he felt like it. It required much time and trouble to train the horse to city environments. Night after night Captain Regan could be seen taking the horse to Niagara street to accustom him to the trolley cars. He finally hit upon a plan to tame the animal. He deviated from the usual course. Purchasing a heavy halter, the captain led the animal to Niagara street. It was then a narrow thoroughfare and the trolleys ran close to the curb. Hour after hour the captain sat down and watched the horse tied to a post and shying at trolley cars. The brute jumped up in the air when a car passed, but in the course of a few weeks the horse Although the horse no longer feared trolleys he was the same spirited animal. He could travel fast. Over a country road he was like a streak of lightning. The speed of Cresceus could not be compared to the country to trotting of the new horse. Captain Regan soon learned that a whip was unnecessary in making the horse speed. Before long the horse became acquainted with the fact that the captain never used a whip and occasionally refused to run. But when the rod was applied the horse balked. The ingenious captain soon dis-covered the failing of the horse, and when he wanted to make him run he tried his Philadelphia Record.

Dr. Charles Conrad Abbott, whose work as a naturalist has made him well known, returned from a fishing excursion not long since deeply impressed with the cruelty that is an almost inevitable attendant upon living. Dr. Abbott caught on this excursion a pike. It was a fish about six inches long, and on opening it to clean it the angler found in its stomach a good sized mud minnow. He examined the mud minnow in some amazement and his hand felt something bulky inside it. Accordingly he cut it open and found within it a tiny pike. He felt now as they feel who study those Chinese puzzles that have ivory ball within ivory ball, and without hesitation he ripped open the little pike. Within it he found what he had expected to find, another mud minnow. Thus in one catch he had come upon a pike containing a minnow that contained a pike that contained a minnow.

Room for Reform.

Philadelphia Records Kaiser Wilhelm has directed his attention toward the reformation of the German language, and by way of a beginning has digalleons. This unique fact has given rise rected that the style of official documents to that other modern expression, "loaded shall be clear and simple and that longwinded sentences swollen with involved subordinate clauses shall be avoided. Unnecessary adverbs, foreign terms, slang, rhetoric and bathos are to be omitted. Who has not read Mark Twain's recipe for the construction of a German sentence? Begin with your noun and anywhere, not less than half a column down, put your verb; then shovel into the intervening space all the participles, double infinitives and compound words of which you can think. If the Kalser should be able to suppress the subordinate clause nuisance the despairing foreigner who seeks to master the language
